day. The School Board said it scheduled the half-day classes because all city high schools had been closed for a year, under order of Gov. Faubus.

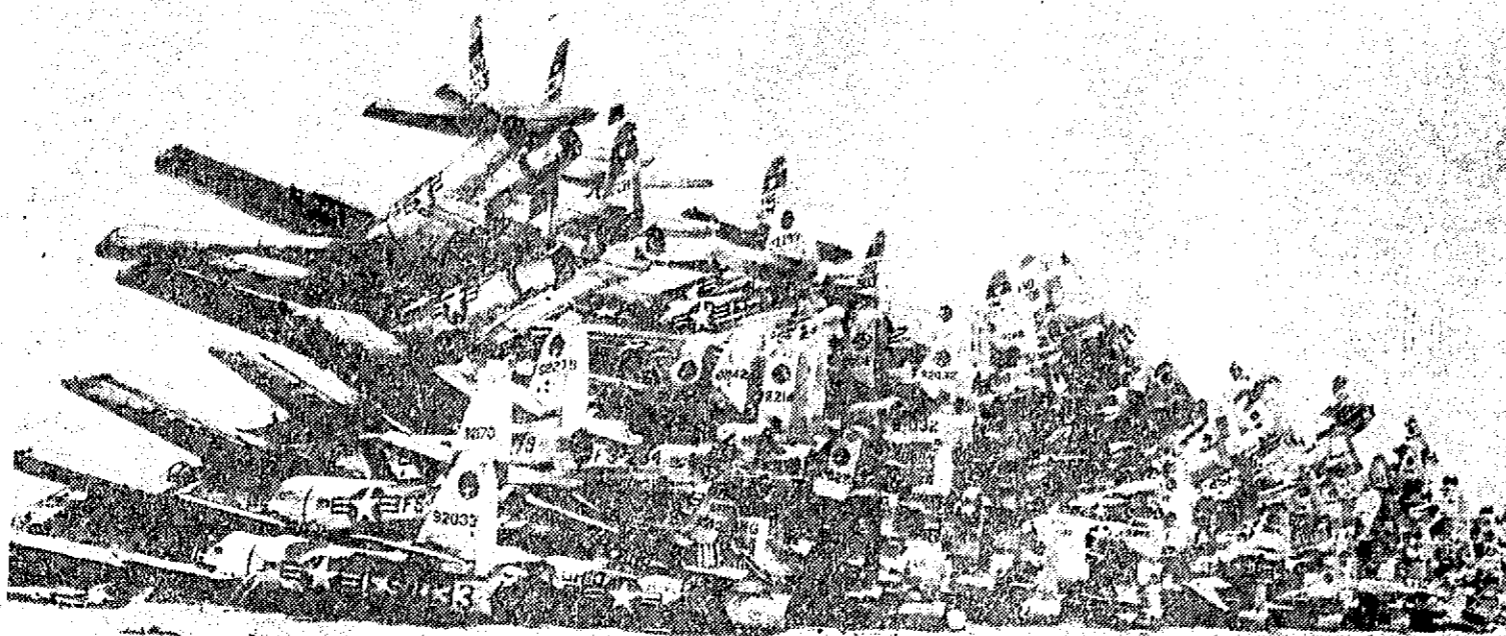

Police Chief Eugene G. Smith would not reveal his plans to keep order but said that he would not "put up with any foolishness."

School Board officials said they would deal "firmly, fairly and effectively" with any students causing trouble in the schools.

Faubus took to television Tuesday night to accuse the School Board and the police chief of becoming puppets of the federal government.

Faubus also tried to discourage the segregationist rally on the capital lawn by saying he would not be there. But segregationists insisted on going ahead with the meeting.

Even as Faubus spoke, the state president of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People reported her house

Mrs. L. C. Bates said several shots were fired and a white neighbor, K. R. Honey, reported one bullet crashed into his living room where it missed his 9-year-old daughter Janet, by less than a foot.

Twice Faubus has stopped school integration in Little Rock. The first time was in the fall of 1957. Then he called out National Guardsmen to temporarily turn back nine Negroes from Central High School. Last fall he closed the schools with a state law which since has been declared unconstitutional.

to start Thursday. A tight vote was forecast.

Kennedy wrote Metcalf the Democratic-backed Labor Committee bill would "carry out all the recommendations" of the Senate group headed by Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.).

At the same time, he said passage of the Eisenhower-backed bill sponsored by Reps. Phil M. Land-rum (D-Ga.) and Robert P. Griffin (R-Mich.) could provoke a Senate House deadlock that would result in no bill being passed.

Barriers of the Landrum-Griffin bill were counting on holding 135 of the 181 House votes and possibly 80 Southern and Midwestern Democrats.

Both sides were of the opinion that 415 or 215 House votes would win a majority of the 435 House members. 12, 212, but vacancies and absences are expected to reduce total voting strength somewhat.

Help For The New Homemaker

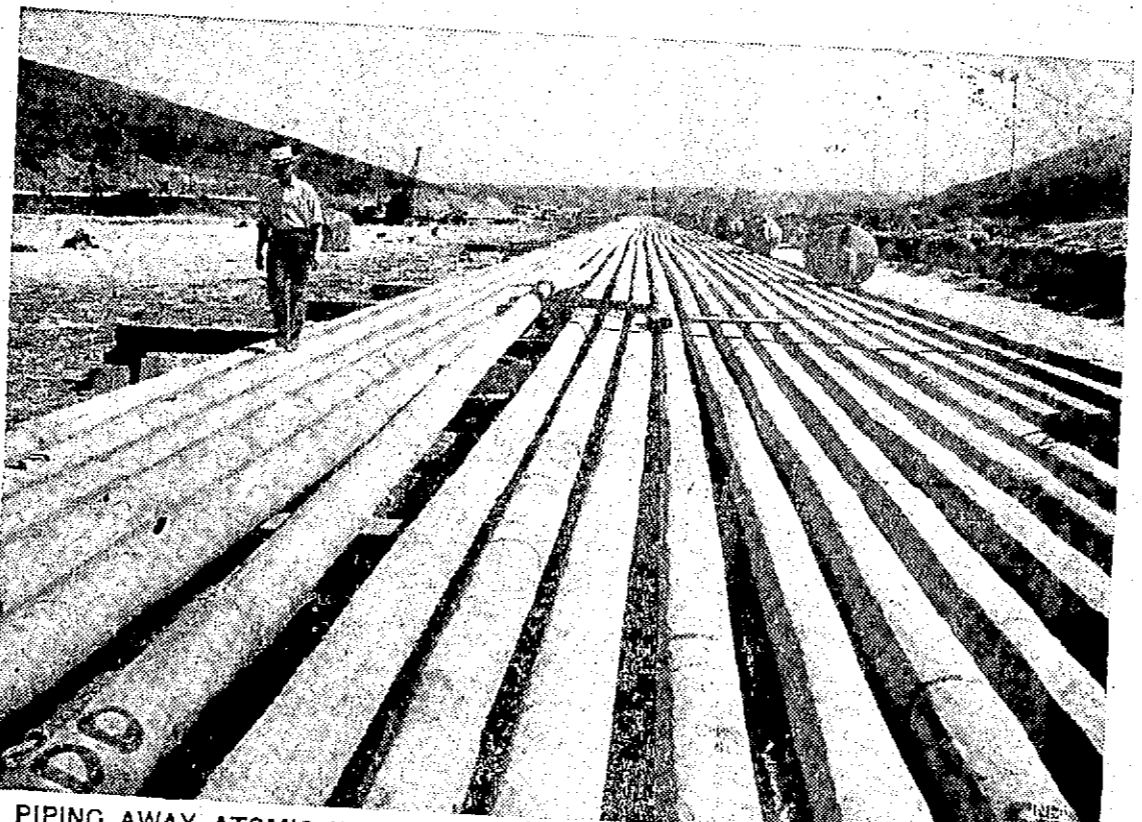

Many young women start housekeeping in small quarters. Because of the fact that many young people are getting married right out of school, income often is inadequate to start them off in a well equipped modern home. As a result, the young homemaker may find that her first home will not have sufficient storage space, especially when it comes to the storage of dishes and glassware.

When space is at a premium, inexpensive shelves can be utilized for storage of good dishes and glassware, provided the china made possible the use of such unusual storage places. Even spaces under the sink and on top shelves, which are not too accessible for every day use, can be utilized for vases, pitchers and items that are bulky and are used only occasionally.

Glasses may be wrapped in saran individually or covered in a group. All plates of the same size may be wrapped together. They are clearly visible because of the transparency of the wrap, yet protected from dust and greasy film.

Even though a young bride may have adequate storage space in her cupboards, the wrapping of seldom used pieces of china and glass with transparent film will save her time and effort.

DO THEY TELL TIME?—A watch that registers mileage on maps is shown at left. Made to scale for standard maps, it produces figures in miles and kilometers. It's rolled along the route on the map and figures are recorded on the face. Timepiece, right, measures pulse beat. It has a dial calibrated for 20 pulsations. The doctor starts the timer, stops it when it reaches 20 and then can quickly determine rate and force of patient's pulse. Incidentally, both Swiss-made watches, shown in New York, also tell the time of day.

PIPING AWAY ATOMIC WASTE—These pipes will carry atomic waste two miles out into the English Channel at Winfrith Heath, Dorset. Buried under the earth and sunken in the water, the pipelines will stretch a total of eight miles from the new Atomic Research Establishment. Two Arkansas Newsmen Get APME Awards

SEATTLE (AP)—The Associated Press Managing Editors Assn. today announced 77 citations for outstanding participation in news and newsphoto reports including awards to the Jonesboro, Ark., Evening Sun and Little Rock's Arkansas Democrat.

The Sun was cited for both news and newsphoto coverage while the Democrat won an award for newsphoto coverage.

Announcement of the awards was made at the annual APME convention began. Citations were given in recognition of exceptional coverage of a news event by one member in behalf of all AP members.

In many instances members supplied details and photos of a breaking story before they used the information themselves. The citations were signed by Michael J. Ogden of the Providence Journal-Bulletin, APME president, and John D. Paulsen of the Fargo Forum chairman of the membership citations committee.

Seventy-six newspapers and nine radio stations and two television stations were named in the citations. In some cases, more than one newspaper or station was named in a citation.

The Sun covered a bank robbery at Weiner, Ark., last February and followed development until the story was wrapped up several days later. The dramatic story which involved a kidnapping, broke after the Sun had published its editions but the newspaper supplied full coverage to other AP members.

The Democrat provided seven pictures of scenes at the disastrous dormitory fire at the Arkansas Negro Boys Industrial School at Wrightsville last March 15. Twenty-one inmates died in the

Pilot Film Used on TV Is Mystifying

TELEVISION IN REVIEW

By WILLIAM EWAD

United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI)—One of the more mystifying handicrafts in the entertainment business is something called the TV pilot film.

The pilot film is a sort of sample swatch of a proposed series needed around by its makers in hopes of landing a TV slot or sponsor, preferably both. Much of the time these hopes die aborning

— some pilot films, like one made by Orson Welles a couple of seasons back are too imaginative for TV; most are too horrendous for even TV to consider.

Last spring for example, platoons of pilots were marched around superplumland equipped with all manner of toothsome titles. Some of them: The Ivy Lea-mier Skagway, Shotgun Slade,

Kitty Hawk Claudia, Theodora

Confessions of Willie, My Name is Savage, Caballero, Johnny

Eager, Johnny, Staccato, Johnny

Midnight, and Johnny Ringo. Only a few of these will be seen on TV this fall.

This is all a kind of roundabout way of getting into Tuesday night and the debut of a new CBSTV series, "Adventure Showcase." The series will only last four weeks, but during that time it will give viewers a chance to look at some genuine nonrunners a quartet of pilots that failed to get off the ground.

The first of these was piped on board Tuesday night and it was quite obvious why it didn't make it: It was wretched.

Its inards centered around a gentleman improbably named

Brook Callahan who had once dabbled in football and then moved on to higher pursuits like private detecting. The episode was a stupefying slab of tedium, one of those things in which a bewildering array of people guffaw in and out of the plot, pummeling

each other at odd moments and mouthing that bizarre jargon that is heard only within the barbarous precincts of private eye adventures. I seem to recall one exchange that went:

First guy — "They're clean as a hound's tooth."

Second guy — "I've known some pretty dirty hounds."

The acting was geared rather suitably to the proceedings, shuttling somewhat uncertainly between lethargy and torpidity. I won't name the guilty.

Because Hope Star's electronic engraving machine copies photographs on a one-to-one scale all pictures submitted for publication on the Society Page—such as engagement and wedding announcements—must conform to the following rules:

WIDTH — 4 1/4 inches (allowing 1/4 inch for cropping, to make a 2-column plate. 4 inches wide. Standard 8x10 prints can not be used. Your studio on request will furnish you a print 4 1/4 inches wide.

GLOSSY black-and-white prints give the best newspaper reproduction. Semi-matte and screen prints will be accepted, however. But colored or tinted prints are forbidden, as they make for inferior printing.

FREE PUBLICATION is given Society portraits, therefore The Star feels it is only just that the above rule on picture size be enforced.

ON PICTURES originating out-of-town where it is impossible to obtain a print of correct size The Star will by special arrangement undertake to photograph subjects to bring them down to 4 1/4 inch width — but there will be a $1 charge for this, and The Star reserves the right to cancel this arrangement without notice, if it interferes with production schedule on news pictures.

Dear Dorothy Dix: When I was young I became infatuated with a man much older than I and, against everyone's advice, married him. He turned out to be a drunkard, tightwad and loafer. Except for very brief periods, I had to work to pay bills. In return I got nothing but beatings. During one of my working periods, I met Andy — the dream of my life. He's a bachelor and claims he can never marry because of family obligations. He was very attentive to me — in a friendly way, of course — but I felt that if things were different, his attitude would be considerably warmer. I finally left my husband — after 12 years of a wretched marriage — and took an apartment. I immediately got in touch with Andy, hoping that my new status would make a difference with him, but he remains the same. I'm sure he thinks more of me than he lets on. Why are some men so unwilling to accept love? I want to love Andy, spoil him, protect him. A woman always seems to know when the right man comes into her life but a man can't recognize the right woman when he meets her. — Faye

Steel Strike Takes Stock Market Toll

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—The month-old steel strike is beginning to take its toll in the stock market.

The deadlocked labor dispute is one of the uncertainties that tripped up the bull market. It ranks only second to the popularly credited unsettling factor: The chance of a thaw in the cold war.

Both are feeding the urge to cash in paper profits after the long price rise in stocks, or what market pundits like to call a technical correction — meaning that price levels look shaky.

The steel strike itself has yet to hurt the over-all economy, its effects are felt in communities where steel mills are closed. Allied industries, coal and railroads, are slowed. The hurt shows up in lower retail sales. In time it may show up in defaults or delayed payments on time purchases.

The strike shows signs of spreading throughout the metal industries, with copper mines closing and aluminum plants facing labor troubles.

If the steel strike lasts past Labor Day—as many in Wall Street now believe it may—the effects on other industries may mushroom fast.

Many firms have built up steel inventories to last for some time, but some companies haven't been able to, and shutdowns will be part of the day's news in September.

What seems to worry the stock market most is that the chance of an early settlement of the steel strike seems dim. Both sides in the dispute have taken firm stands and show little indication of yielding.

Most market analysts are on record as believing that the current business boom won't be halted if the steel strike ends in September. After that, they aren't so sure. And the stock market, always sensitive to uncertainties, has reflected that fear.

Economists for the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. predict that the dispute will be settled before the end of September. In that case they look for a vigorous expansion of the over-all economy in the final months of the year.

"If for no other reason than that steel inventories will need to be augmented after any strike that lasts beyond Labor Day."

The War of the Independence began in Massachusetts in 1775 with the Battles of Lexington and Dunker Hill.

Open Hearings Demand Is Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate racks probes today rejected a demand by Walter Ruther, president of the United Auto Workers Union, that it open to the public its closed-door investigation of the union.

Chairman John L. McClellan (D-Ark) announced the decision as the committee recessed for lunch after hearing its first witness.

The committee met for nearly two hours before calling the first witness, John D. Dale of Red Bank, N.J., head of the George Elliott Co. Inc., a firm which specializes in efficiency studies for factories.

The committee's Republican members had announced in advance they wanted to question Dale about his firm's associations with Peter Zvara, a former UAW official.

The inquiry has heavy political overtones, he UAW usually supports Democrats. One of the committee's Democratic members is Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.), a likely contender for his party's presidential nomination next year.

Ruther launched his demands for open sessions of the committee in a telegram to McClellan Monday, asserting that Republican members would use the inquiry to smear the UAW.

ONE MORE TO COME—Poised for passing in training at Winoski Park, Vt., are four quarterbacks hoping for the number one spot with the New York Giants. They are, left to right, Charley Conerly, Frank Gifford, Don Heinrich and George Shaw. Still another, Lee Grosseup of Utah joins the squad after the All-Star Game at Soldier Field in Chicago, Aug. 14.

Protection For Clothing And Infants

THE RIGHT WAY . . . The correct way of disposing of plastic garment bags is to tie them in knots, and throw them in a covered garbage can. They should never be used in the nursery or be given to children to play with.

This mother knows that the disposable ultra-thin plastic bag in which her dress is delivered after cleaning should be disposed of after the bag has served its original purpose. She is following the safety precautions endorsed by safety experts cooperating with the Society of the Plastics Industry by shredding or knotting the material and disposing of it in a covered container.

Plastic bags used to protect foods, clothing and other merchandise have been put to many useful supplementary purposes around the house. The heavier plastic bags used for fruit and vegetables are widely and safely used to store leftovers in a refrigerator, keep food in an ice cooler for picnics, carry wet clothing or diapers, or protect books from rain.

The ultra-thin plastic bag, though, presents a hazard when misused as a substitute protective covering for an infant's sheeting on cribs, play pens, baby carriages, furniture, etc.

The Society urges parents not to mis-use this ultra-thin plastic bag, but after it has served its purposes to destroy the bag by shredding and/or knotting and placing it in a covered disposal unit away from infants.

THE STORY: Evasiveness, distrust and violence have greeted Grady Haskell, the deputy sheriff who has come to the Trinity Hills in search of a missing lawman. Only one man has aided him. But even this man, Joe Peele, the town doctor, refuses to tell Haskell what he wants to know.

XV

Ruby Peele stepped from the hotel door, moved to the edge of the porch and there leaned against one of the posts of the overhang. She was entirely unaware of Haskell's presence.

Joe Peele's daughter.

Over at Jellie's store Jim Kinn showed briefly as he turned in at the lighted doorway. Another figure came out, and, quick Haskell, angled across the street.

Peele's quick catch of startled breath and gladness of her call.

"Neal—Neal Andrews!"

"Evening Ruby!" came the answering drivel. Then the speaker was up the steps and standing beside the girl in the light from the hotel door.

Here was a house, rowdy lean, nosed, clad in faded, ragged jeans and jumper and worn battered boots. Here were, then, hand-walked, cranked, stained to a clean, rusty bronze by wind and sun. Here, quick, eager eyes and words and the same in reply.

"On Neal I was beginning to believe you'd forgotten the way to town."

"Now I darn near did," was the laughing answer. "Been kind of busy, fixing the cabin up so a lady might be willing to live in it. I got down to my last cup of beans, so I figured I'd better come in for some supplies and a chance to visit my best girl. I started too late to be in time for supper."

"Which means you're hungry, of course?"

"Plumb wolfish."

They were gone then, hand in hand, leaving behind the bright echo of their young voices.

Grady Haskell lit his second cigar, slowly. Abruptly he knew the weight of the old aloneness. It came to him at times like this. It was a penalty of the profession. The star worked that way. It put a man off by himself.

When or where had he, Grady Haskell, ever known such glad greeting? His lips twisted in sudden bleakness. If ever, he could recall neither the time or the place. The last girl he had faced was one who had whipped-sawed him with indignance and scorn.

Katherine Levening.

Sound came in from down street, the rattle of massed hoofs. Hoofs coming at a steady-paced trot, which fact somehow carried in it a hint of things ominous. Haskell dropped back into the deeper shadow of the porch and watched the three flow of movement pass.

A lone rider was out ahead of the rest, a high, thin shape in the starlight. A full dozen others followed, that star of yours would be like a red flag to a bull."

Haskell swung his shoulders and spoke with a sudden harshness.

"The time ever comes Potter, when I'm afraid to carry this star anywhere, that's when I take it off—for good."

Amos Potter hesitated, held with a moment of indecision. Then, as he wheeled away, he murmured:

"I say again that to go into the Canyon House would be poor judgment on your part and not prove a thing. But if you must, go I wish you luck. You may need it."

Haskell stared at the Canyon House, the bleakness of his mood deepening. An appreciation of the facts? Others had better start showing some of it, for they couldn't be further wrong if they thought to go on blocking him with evasion and lies.

Haskell stiffened a hand against the swinging door of the cabin and drove it open, far enough to enter, yet not to its fullest extent, for it was blocked by violent contact with a man's back. The owner of this came around in a gust of anger.

He was lank and narrow jawed, badly scarred with pock marks and with a quick, snarling anger flitting his lips across broken teeth. But as he glimpsed, Haskell's star he gave staring.

"The bar was lined, Art Orco bustled heavily back and forth, pouring drinks. At the rear of the room a gaunt rider sat in a tipped back chair and guardedly observed the newly arrived activity. This one Haskell recognized as the grizzled Hayfork hand, Sandy, who had been with Katherine Levening and Vince Tondler in the Rancheria Creek Meadows yesterday morning, and who had later trailed him all across the hills to Reservation.

Miss Nancy Lindley Pledges Vows With Terrell Tackette

Given in marriage by her father, Miss Nancy Ellen Lindley became the bride of Terrell Lawrence Tackette in a ceremony at the First Baptist Church, Anadarko, Oklahoma on July 14.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Lindley are parents of the bride, while the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Tackette of Prescott.

Rev. Wilbur J. Clark read the double ring wedding vows at 3 p. m. before a huckleberry covered arch with white California daisies flanked with candelabra of white tapers decorated with huckleberry and white daisies. The aisle pews were topped with nosegays of white net and white daisies.

Traditional organ wedding music was presented by Miss Francis Schaub. She also accompanied Mrs. Phil Manscheck of Stillwater, Okla., who sang "Walk Hand in Hand" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride wore a floor length gown of French imported chiffon lace and tulle with the skirt enhanced by six lace panels over satin. The dress also featured long sleeves tapering to points at the wrists and a high neckline with Peter Pan lace collar. Her finger tip veil of illusion was attached to a crown of seed pearls. She carried a white satin bound Bible topped with a bouquet of white butterfly roses with white salin streamers.

Serving her sister as matron of honor, Mrs. Vernon O. Crum of Buffalo, wore an empire waisted royal blue taffeta dress with satin sash and a taffeta head band and shoes to match. She carried a bouquet of blue daisies with white lace tuffs.

Bridesmaids were: Miss Sandy Yount, Miss Carol Kidd, Miss Evelyn Tackette, sister of the bridegroom, Prescott, and Mrs. Wendell Blankenship, Lawton, Okla. They were attired in dresses of feather blue taffeta with matching accessories identical to the matron of honor.

Identically dressed were the candlelighters, Miss Betsy DeFord and Miss Carol Jean Woods. They wore beige empire waisted taffeta dresses with matching accessories and wristlets of blue daisies with white lace tuffs.

Vernon O. Crum Jr., brother-in-law of the bride, Buffalo, served as best man. Ushering were Wendell Blankenship, Lawton, Jack Collier, Jerry Frist and Nathan C. Hill.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Lindley wore a pink lace dress with pink shoes and a feather hat. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Tackette, wore a rose lace dress with white accessories. Both wore a pink glamoella corsage.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Fellowship Hall of the church.

Assisting with the reception were Miss Edith Ann Lindley, cousin of the bride, Boling, Texas; Mrs. James McKelvey, sister of the groom, Texarkana, Texas; and Mrs. S. A. First, Mrs. K. C. Finch, Mrs. Ollis Houston, Mrs. Cecil Roberts and Mrs. L. H. Murphy.

The bride's table was covered with white organdy over white decorated with pink and white daisies. Centering the table was an arrangement of pink and white daisies in a crystal bowl and crystal candelabra with white tapers.

The five-tiered pink and white wedding cake and crystal punch service completed the setting.

When the couple left for a wedding trip to Lake Texoma Lodge the bride wore a white sheath dress with embroidered jacket and white accessories. She wore a corsage of white butterfly roses.

The couple has established a

Desha Okays Bonds for Road to Plant

MCGEEHEE, Ark. (AP) — Residents of Desha County voted overwhelmingly yesterday for a proposed $225,000 bond issue to build a road to an industrial site.

Complete unofficial vote was 2,212 for the issue and 129 against. The proceeds would be used to finance construction of a 12½-mile hard-surfaced road between Highway 1 and the site of a proposed 35-million-dollar Potlatch paper mill near McGeehee.

If Potlatch decides against the mill, the bonds will not be floated. The company has until Oct. 1 to exercise an option on the site, which is about 7 miles northeast of McGeehee.

We've never made a survey to prove it, but there's every indication that the most attractive ladies on the highways are customers of Esso Dealers. Goodness knows they've tried hard enough to cause this by having the cleanest, freshest, best-equipped rest rooms in the business. Everything you need for Happy Motoring[®] you'll find at the Esso Sign. Including the prettiest customers!

Arkansas Klan Leader Quits Organization

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A. C. Hightower, Arkansas grand dragon of the U.S. Klans, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan quit the organization yesterday. He laid his petition to a futile power struggle with a dissident faction and said he would issue a fuller statement later today.

Hightower, a Little Rock barber shop owner, chartered the Arkansas organization last June 3. He resigned as state agent of the Klans yesterday.

Hightower said some Klansmen had disagreed with him on the need for local action on such problems as school integration. He said as school integration.

He explained he was afraid he would be held legally responsible for actions of Klansmen over whom he had no control.

At Atlanta, E. L. Edwards, imperial wizard of the U.S. Klans, declined to say whether Hightower was fired or if his resignation had been received at Klan headquarters. He said he planned to name a new Arkansas grand dragon soon.

Hightower was appointed grand dragon by Edwards May 20.

Hightower recently had announced an initiative drive to recruit Klansmen and recruiting posters were found last Sunday.

He was fired or if his resignation had been received at Klan headquarters. He said he planned to name a new Arkansas grand dragon soon.
